Consumer Decision Making trains young people in decision making skills related to purchasing decisions. The contest teaches how to observe, compare and make decisions based on facts collected. It also provides experience in organizing thoughts and defending decisions with oral reasons. In this contest, 4-Hers learn to rank articles or products over others based on standards and quality. Participants also gain skills in teamwork through a group think activity.

Contact: Michelle Matthews