Hospital Couture

Traditional hospital gowns- with their flesh-exposing flaps and flimsy feel- may soon be replaced by a splash of haute couture. The Cleveland Clinic is testing new gowns designed by fashion icon Diane Von Furstenberg, 63. The unisex prototypes can be worn with the opening in the back or front, and provide complete coverage. "We believe that providing our patients with a comfortable, stylish hospital gown that helps to improve dignity will improve the overall hospital experience," says executive liaison Jeanne Ryan.
